The panoramic route passes the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, guarded by soldiers in traditional dress, the Parliament and the Panathenaic Stadium, where the first Olympic Games of the modern era were held. We continue to the Library, the Academy and the University, three buildings representative of 19th-century architecture with classical influence. Free time. Accommodation.

We visit Hydra, considered the queen of the Saronic islands and a favorite of artists and high society, whose picturesque port stands out for its unique architecture. We continue to Poros, a picturesque island almost joined to the Peloponnese, the smallest of the three and of great beauty, green and full of lemon and pine trees. We go on to Aegina, the largest island in the Saronic Gulf, inhabited since the second millennium BC, with a remarkable historic heritage and a capital full of neoclassical buildings.
