Olympia was the most important sanctuary of the ancient Greeks, a place of worship of Zeus, first among the gods, in whose honor the Games were held. The importance of these games is clear from the large participation of Greek cities, which kept a truce for the duration of the celebration, and from the fact that the Olympiad, the four-year period between two games, was recognized as the only chronological system accepted throughout Greece. Visit to the Olympia Museum. In the afternoon, we pass the new suspension bridge, the largest in the world, and arrive at Delphi. Dinner and overnight stay.

METEORA-ATHENS (357 KM)

Breakfast. Visit to two of the Meteora Monasteries. The Meteora are a set of tall, hard-to-reach rock pillars in the center of the Thessaly valley, formed by several geological processes. It is a unique geological phenomenon, which creates an unrivaled landscape, in total harmony with the countless monasteries built on top of the rocks. These pillars, of truly peculiar shape, attracted the attention of ascetic monks in the mid-11th century. A century later, the ascetics organized themselves in the Stagoi convent and called it Panayia Doupiani. From the 14th century, the first monasteries of the region began to be founded. Departure for Athens, passing through Thermopylae, where the statue of the Spartan king Leonidas stands. Arrival in Athens. Overnight stay.
